An act that promotes camaraderie and a sense of belonging for individuals in groups with marginalized/underrepresented identities, that is above and beyond the scope of a staff member’s role at the University.

Examples
When a conversation is taking place at a lunchroom table about offensive stereotypes of women, intervening and asking a female co-worker sitting at the table if she wants to join a different table for lunch.

Setting up a session with Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) for faculty and Graduate Student Instructors (GSIs) about student mental health issues and ways instructors can be more accommodating.

Creating presentation materials in different formats (website accessibility, screen reader accessible).

Providing support to those who have experienced a racial/ethnic hardship, or are impacted by local or global racial/ethnic targeted incidents.
